

Why not ask each child to bring in a beach towel on one of the last days of school. Then allow them to each choose a quiet shady spot in the school playground to read! As a follow-up activity, they could each make a postcard to send to a friend in their summer holidays.

What to do:

Colour the front cover of the postcard below, cut it out and glue to one side of a piece of cardboard the same size. Now cut out the back of the postcard and glue to the other side of the cardboard. When dry, write a message to one of your friends telling them what you are up to in your summer holidays. Make sure you tell them about the great book, magazine or comic you are reading at the moment. Pop your card in the post and hope that someone sends you one too!
