Celebrate Nature Book Week!

NATURE BOOK WEEK is the Wilderness Society's annual celebration of nature and storytelling, running this year from 10-18 October. As part of the program, the Wilderness Society announces the winners of the Karajia and Environment Awards for Children's Literature, which have been running since 1994.

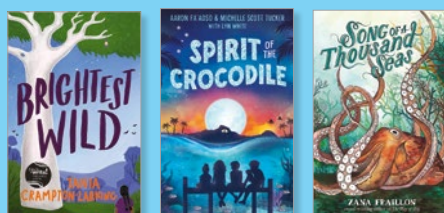

We're excited to bring you value book packs featuring a selection of titles from this year's awards, helping you share with your students the importance of caring for our natural world and striving for sustainability so we can enjoy our planet for years to come.

Open Up Worlds of Pretend Play

Role play brings learning to life, but preparing and facilitating scenarios can require significant time in an already busy schedule.

Luckily, there are resources that do some of the heavy lifting, supporting playful and purposeful, rich learning where children's own imaginations naturally extend the important work you do in developing language, collaboration, and critical thinking skills in your students.

Whether constructing environments and acting out everyday routines, or developing stories and characters, there is no "right way" to play with these resources—a feature that keeps children engaged for longer as they create, negotiate roles, and lead their own learning.
