THIS DROP OF WATER

Written by Stef Gemmill | Illustrated by Mel Armstrong

Teaching Notes prepared by David Benton | Recommended for: Years 1-4 (lower to mid-primary)

BEFORE READING

Where water comes from

Hold up a glass of water and ask the class:
Where do you think this water came from before it reached the tap?

Take a few answers, then ask:
Do you think this is the same water that dinosaurs drank?

(It might be! Water has been cycling around Earth for billions of years.) Tell students they're about to follow one drop of water on its journey.

Water mindfulness

Ask students to close their eyes and listen. Play 30–60 seconds of rain sounds (easily found on YouTube). Then ask:

What does rain feel like? What does it smell like?
Where does the rain go after it falls?

Take a few answers before opening the book.

AFTER READING

Science (Years 3-4)

- Can you describe Drop's journey in order? What are the different stages it goes through?

  Students should try and identify the key stages: run-off → surface water → evaporation/ transpiration → condensation (→ drought) → precipitation → infiltration → groundwater → flood → water storage → filtration → water supply. Accept any reasonable ordering and use it as an opportunity to build the class's understanding of the water cycle together; mistakes could provide opportunity for some great discussion.

- What is the difference between evaporation and transpiration?

  Evaporation is when the sun's heat turns liquid water into water vapour directly from water surfaces (rivers, oceans, puddles).

  Transpiration is when water is pulled up through a plant's roots and stems and released as vapour through tiny holes in the leaves (called stomata). Both put water vapour into the air to help form clouds.

English (Years 1-4)

- The author uses words like 'wriggles', 'jiggles', 'shivers' and 'shudders' to describe Drop. Why do you think she chose these words? How do they make you feel as a reader?

  These are verbs, or action words, that give Drop a personality, making an invisible scientific process feel alive and relatable. This is called 'personification'. They also help.

Follow-up question: Can you think of any other words that could describe Drop's journey?

Sustainability

- The book shows that Drop can pick up pollution and grime along its journey. What are some ways we could reduce the pollution that enters our waterways?

  Students might suggest not littering near rivers or beaches, using less plastic, supporting wetlands and vegetation along riverbanks, reducing chemical use in gardens and farms. Accept any thoughtful environmental response.

- The back of the book mentions 'reduce, reuse, recycle' for water. Can you think of one example for each of how to reduce, reuse and recycle at home or in the community?

  Reduce: shorter showers, turning off the tap while brushing teeth. Reuse: using washing-up water on the garden, collecting rainwater. Recycle: recycled wastewater used on crops or in factories.

ABOUT THE BOOK

Pearl and her family live on the steamer Alpha. All day long, they paddle up and down the Darling and Murray rivers, trading everything from flour and tea to jewellery and wood. As summer arrives, the water levels suddenly drop.

The Alpha is stranded!

How will the family survive months on the dry riverbed? What can Pearl do to help? Will it ever rain?

Based on the true story of Pearl Wallace, Australia's first female river boat captain!

PADDLE STEAMER PEARL

Written by Neridah McMullin | Illustrated by Jessica Corkran

Teaching Notes prepared by NLA Publishing | Recommended for: Years 1-4 (lower to mid-primary)

Front cover

Invite students to examine the front cover closely using the 'See, Think, Wonder' routine. Encourage students to identify what details they notice in the illustrations, discussing what they think is happening. Who might the people on the boat be? What clues suggest where and when the story is taking place? What type of boat are the characters on and what could its purpose be? Record students' questions and observations about the characters, setting and plot. Revisit these ideas after reading, to compare how students' knowledge and thinking has changed.

AFTER READING

English

Creating connections

Encourage students to make connections between their own experiences and the story. Have they travelled by boat or visited a river? How do food, mail and other goods reach their community today? Discuss how transport has changed over time. Why were waterways once important travel routes for many Australians?

Comprehension and meaning

As you read with students, encourage them to use both the text and illustrations to deepen their understanding of the story. Discuss how the illustrations provide clues about the setting, the characters, their roles and the challenges of travelling and living on a paddle steamer. What do the clothing, equipment and towns reveal about the time in which this book is set?

Explore unfamiliar vocabulary terms such as 'skipper', 'engineer' and 'deckhand'. Use contextual clues and the glossary at the end of the book to help determine meanings. Create a class word wall, adding new words as you define them. Encourage students to use this language in any related stories.

Science/STEM

Design a paddle steamer

Paddle steamers travelled along the Darling and Murray river systems, carrying people, animals and supplies. They navigated changing river conditions including sandbars, droughts, floods and fluctuating water levels.

Use Trove to search old photographs and images of paddle steamers. Guide student research into the various features such as a paddle wheel placement, hull size, deck size and sleeping quarters. Discuss why these features were important, considering the function and use of these boats. Students can sketch and label these features, using the image at the end of the book as a guide.

Using simple classroom craft materials, challenge students to design and build a model paddle steamer, capable of carrying the greatest amount of weight without sinking. Test each design and share observations on how shape, balance and buoyancy help with performance.

HASS

Pearl Wallace

Pearl Wallace was the first woman in Australia to become a river boat captain. Explore the end matter as a springboard into a guided inquiry into Captain Pearl Wallace's life.

Encourage students to create an informative 'one-pager' about Pearl Wallace and her importance. Why were paddle steamers significant to Australia's development?
